AUCTIONING YOUR COINS ?

First Face the Facts !

There are some Collections too small to be worth
Selling at Auction.

THERE IS NO COLLECTION TOO LARGE FOR COIN GALLERIES TO HANDLE AT AUCTION.

We at Coin Galleries understand and appreciate fine Ancient and Foreign Coins. Our Staff is among the best trained and expert in America. Our Staff doesn't know everything but it does know how to find out what it doesn't know. You can be sure your coins will be accurately described. The best pieces will be cleanly and sharply illustrated in an attractive quality catalogue.

BUYING COINS FOR YOUR COLLECTION ?

You can be sure that the coins you bid on will be as honestly described as is humanly possible. In addition, we do not catalogue doubtful material.

FOREWORD

While Coin Galleries' Mail Bid Sales have always been well received in the past, we believe the time has come when the relative informality and small scope of our presentations should be enlarged. This point of view is certainly in accord with the thinking of many of our friends interested in both the buying and selling of fine Numismatic material. It is with great pleasure, therefore, that we are able to open the Fall Season with a Public Auction. Depending upon the availability of choice coins we will continue to hold Public Auction Sales of the quality demonstrated by this catalogue.

If our return to the Public Auction represents a response to public demand it must be said that the material offered here itself demands that the Numismatic Fraternity be given the best possible opportunity to consider the acquisition of the outstanding rarities in the fields of Netherlands and Polish gold, Swedish Silver and Early Talers. The Collector should need only a glance at the listings of the pieces in question to realize that the major groups of material in the Sale represent collections formed years ago, when it was much easier for the specialist to gather together a really distinguished group of coins in his favorite series. Coins of such high quality are all too seldom available in quantity to the really advanced Collector today. We trust he will be able to take advantage of the opportunity presented by this Auction.

The estimates for the coins have been prepared in accordance with the current trends on the European market. The American Collector is only beginning to realize that the days when it was possible to pick up good bargains in Europe are no longer with us. The wind now seems to blow from the opposite direction. During the last year the European Collector and Dealer have been observed devoting an increasing attention to the United States as a source for fine coins. The tremendous prosperity in England, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and other countries has created an unprecedented demand. We have reason to know that bidders in this Sale will face the stiffest competition from abroad and should consider their bids for choice pieces accordingly. It can be added that the European interest reflects an important aspect of World economics no sensible Collector can well ignore. We are witnessing the initial stages of a cyclical upswing of prices. Today's buyers will be able to look back on their purchases with satisfaction. Those who hesitate will be haunted with vain regrets, and bore their friends in the years to come with stories of the coins they didn't acquire when they had the chance.

THE W. ALTON JONES COLLECTION

OF

GOLD COINS OF THE NETHERLANDS

In making available this superb collection of Dutch Gold Coins, 1795-1933, formed by the late industrialist Mr. W. Alton Jones, we feel that a few preliminary remarks will be in order. The collection is undoubtedly the most important single group of the series ever offered for sale in the United States. It is very close to being complete.

We have catalogued the collection according to the standard handbook, "Nederlandse Munten Van 1795-1961" by the eminent Dutch Numismatist, Mr. Jacques Schulman of Amsterdam. Each coin has been assigned its Schulman number. Where appropriate, a Friedberg number has been included. It should be noted, however, that Friedberg only treats the major types in the series, while Schulman devotes the keen eye of the specialist to the coins of his native country. The estimates given are not based on those in Friedberg but on current prices as reflected by recent Sales in Amsterdam.

For the general Collector of European gold coins the sudden disappearance of gold issues in the Netherlands during the middle portion of the 19th Century may be something of a puzzle. The suspension of the standard issues of gold was entirely due to the peculiar currency conditions operating in the country during the period in question.

By 1800, the Provinces of the Dutch Netherlands were on an effective Silver Standard, to the general satisfaction of the commercial community. This meant that the monetary unit of the country was the Silver Guilder. Gold Double Ducats and Ducats were struck as "Trade Coins" whose value was rated at a variable number of Guilders depending on the market price of gold.

When Louis Napoleon became King of Holland, the French Bi-metallic, or double standard, was adopted on December 15, 1806. It provided that the issues of gold and silver should have a fixed relation to each other. The native issues were suspended from 1810 to 1814 when Napoleon decided to govern the country directly and French gold and silver coins were struck at the mint in Utrecht.

With the establishment of the Kingdom of the Netherlands under the House of Orange after the fall of the French Empire, the double standard was continued. There were silver Guilders, multiples and fractions, and gold 10 Guilder pieces issued during the reign of William I. The gold 5 Guilder coin was only struck in 1826 and 1827. Trade Ducats, a traditional Dutch coin, continued to be issued at no standard rated value in Guilders.

DUTCH GOLD

Historically the Dutch had always been a silver using people. The variations in the market value of gold and silver, by the end of the reign of William I, had the effect of driving the gold coins into the melting pot while silver was plentiful. On September 26, 1847, the silver standard was legally adopted. Regular gold issues ceased. This accounts for the rarity of the few 10 and 5 Guilder gold coins of William II during his reign, 1840-49. They were only struck in 1842 and 1843, respectively.

Because gold fulfilled a commercial need, however, arrangements were made to strike trade coins. A new denomination, the "William", or "Negotiepenning" was projected, with its Double and Half. These rare and attractive coins were inscribed with their weight and fineness but not a value in Guilders. Those of William II were really patterns and exist only as Proofs. During the first part of the reign of William III they exist as Proofs and in an extremely limited issue struck for circulation. The law stated that they could be struck for private account, which partly explains the rarity of the coins. In short, except for a small issue of Negotiepennings during 1850-53, and small quantities of Ducats, the Dutch abandoned the domestic use of gold.

By 1872 the startling increase in the production of silver in the United States drove down the price. The Netherlands Mint was forced to suspend the free coinage of the metal on May 23, 1873. The Gold Standard was finally and reluctantly adopted on June 6, 1875. The free coinage of 10 Guilder pieces began again. The silver Guilder and its multiple remained legal tender, much as the U.S. Silver Dollar did and still does, although the actual silver value of the coins was below their face value.

It has become the custom to consider the Ducats of the Netherlands as coins struck for trade with the Far East. Friedberg consigns those of the 19th Century and after to the Oriental section of his frequently useful publication. This conventional attitude does an injustice to an interesting and historic coin. The Ducat is a Netherlands gold piece which, throughout its history, has been associated with the great commercial enterprise of a vigorous people. Some of them were used in the East, but rather late in their important currency and numismatic careers. They are no more Eastern Gold coins than a Mexican Dollar is Chinese because it was popular in China. The Ducat is a European gold coin and should be so regarded. Many dates are rare.

In all our professional experience we have seldom been privileged to handle a specialized Collection in any series equal to the Polish Gold Coins offered in this Public Auction Sale. The rarity of the majority of the pieces is only surpassed by the Superb, almost breathtaking, Uncirculated Condition of almost all of them. The coins themselves are accompanied by a magnificent series of historical Gold Medals of large size, few of which are ever seen on the market today. We doubt if another Collection of equal quality is likely to be available for many years. The late owner was fortunate in having been able to acquire most of his coins more than a generation ago. It goes without saying, he had opportunities that cannot be duplicated today.

The Coins and Medals have been catalogued in accordance with Hutten-Czapski's monumental, "Catalogue de la Collection des Medailles et Monnaies Polonaises", the standard work on Polish numismatics. We also feel that a brief survey of Polish history should be useful to the Collector. A summary of the principal high points of Poland's story, adapted from an essay on the subject by Dr. Charles Schwarzenberg and originally published in the Numismatic Review, Number 5, for 1961, has, therefore, been included by way of providing a simple background for the reader before he goes on to examine the description of the coins themselves.

HISTORY OF POLAND

With the world divided into two opposing camps as it is today, it is not easy for those Collectors who still enjoy the comparative safety conferred by American citizenship, and residence within the wide territories of the United States, to realize that many national groups in the heart of Europe once had their day of Power as independent Nations. Poland, existing under an all too familiar Russian oppression, was once a major European State. In this connection, there are two or three points of importance that must never be forgotten. Poland is a "modern" nation that only emerged into a recognizable form during the early part of the Middle Ages. Throughout her recorded history she has suffered from being the most defenseless country in Europe with no natural geographical boundaries. Her story can almost be said to have been one great "Security" problem, open as she was to attacks from every quarter. Finally, Poland can be considered Europe's earliest Republic.

While it is true that there were "Republics" in Medieval Italy, Poland was, for many centuries, the only State, as distinct from a city, that was referred to as a Republic. The American reader should not be confused by the fact that there were Kings of Poland, for these Kings were elected and the nation consciously called itself a Republic. The Polish Kings had an enviable record as champions of the rights of their subjects against the exactions of the great and small landowners. But the Diet, or Parliament, insisting on a politically unworkable constitution, refused to reform itself, or permit the creation of any lasting executive power. So the Polish Republic can almost be said to have committed suicide. All this took place two centuries before Hitler and Stalin cheerfully slit the throat of the new Republic that was created from the shambles left after the first World War.

The history of the Poles prior to the end of the 10th Century is virtually unknown. It was not until Jagiello, Grand Duke of Lithuania, became King of Poland in 1386, with the title of Vladislaus II, that the country can be said to have acquired any significant form and importance. The Jagiellonic period, from 1386 to 1572, saw Poland rise to great power. The vigorous Lithuanian ruling house acquired vast territories until their dominion stretched from the Baltic to the Black Sea. Two centuries of their rule made Poland great. Had the dynasty lasted another century it is possible that the anarchical Constitution of the Republic might have been sensibly modified and the Polish people would have been spared much misery and many periods of ruin.

The great Vladislaus II died in 1434 in his 83rd year. The most outstanding of his immediate successors, his second son, was elected to the Polish throne in 1447 as Casimir IV and reigned until 1492. Casimir's fifth and most capable son, Sigismund I, reigned from 1506-1548. His son, Sigismund II August, 1548-1572, was the last male descendant of Jagiello. He remained childless. As the last hereditary native Sovereign of Lithuania, Sigismund offered to give his Lithuanian countrymen the free choice of a successor, if they would enter a Union with the Poles. The Union was achieved at Lublin in 1569. From that time, the Polish Republic became a combination of the Crown of Poland and the Grand Dukedom of Lithuania.

When Sigismund II August died in 1572, after an experiment with a French Prince, Stephen Bathory, a proven warrior on the Turkish frontier, was elected the new King of Poland. He died in 1586 after a glorious reign and the electors of the Republic were again free to choose a King. A sister of King Sigismund II August had married into the new Swedish royal house of Vasa. The electors duly chose her son, the Crown Prince of Sweden, as Sigismund III. Their growing international problems persuaded the Poles not to risk a perfectly free choice after Sigismund's death in 1632. They elected, first, his elder son Vladislaus IV. In 1648, after his death without heirs, they elected his younger son John Casimir. This luckless King went through a disastrous war over the Swedish succession and endless troubles with the Russian Ukrainian population of his eastern dominions. In the end, the King abdicated in 1668.

HISTORY OF POLAND

Now then came the epoch in which Poland was truly a Republic, for that element of heredity, which the Jagiellonic blood of the Vasa Kings represented, was entirely discarded. Elections were uninfluenced by hereditary considerations. In fact, the Polish election after John Casimir's abdication did not favor any of the candidates proposed by foreign powers. In an uncharacteristic fit of patriotism, the gentry elected Michael, scion of a remote cadet line of the Lithuanian rulers. The choice was most ill-advised. Fortunately, he died quickly. The day after his death, the Grand Marshal of the Crown, John Sobieski, defeated the Turks at the famous battle of Chocim on November 11, 1673. He was deservedly elected King, as John III. His reign brought new brilliance to the Republic. In 1683 he was in supreme command when the Turks were defeated at the siege of Vienna. An enormous variety of medals were struck to recall the victory. King John's coins show his typically Polish features with the drooping moustache and the military haircut. His son, James, expected to be chosen as successor to his renowned father. But during the Interregnum of 1696-1698 the meddling of foreign powers led to James Sobieski's defeat and he left the country.

After many undignified squabbles, the Crown of Poland finally fell to the Elector Frederick August of Saxony in 1697 who was styled August II in Poland. Because of his inordinate vanity and ambition he sought to use Poland as a pawn in a gamble for some misty scheme of Empire. He was beaten in 1704 and expelled by King Charles XII of Sweden. The conqueror had Stanislaus Leszczynski elected in his stead. In 1709, with the help of Peter the Great of Russia, August II expelled Stanislaus in his turn. August II, of course, had a variety of coins struck, some for the German dominions of which he was Prince Elector and some for the Polish Republic. After the death of the Saxon King in 1733, there was another attempt to restore King Stanislaus, but August III, son of August II, prevailed. He became, if possible, an even more ineffective King than his father. The Republic had practically no government at all.

August III finally died in 1763. The Interregnum, lasting one year, led up to an election which sufficiently showed the condition of the Republic. Stanislaus Poniatowski, a nobleman of no very illustrious birth, was chosen King. As a young diplomat, he had enjoyed the favors of the great Catherine II of Russia and it was hoped she would not hurt him. King Stanislaus August was an excellent Sovereign when he was allowed to reign. Between the Russian Empress on one hand, and the unruly aristocracy on the other, he was given little opportunity to do so. It was during his reign that Russia and Prussia decided to cut up Poland between them and Austria reluctantly claimed her share. In due course there was only a Duchy of Warsaw, made by Napoleon out of a part of old Poland. This Duchy was given to the King of Saxony, the grandson of King August III. The Duchy, with its Saxon Prince, did not outlast Napoleon's Empire.

After 1815, most of the country reverted to Russia. Alexander I took the Crown of Poland for himself. Austria kept Galicia, and Prussia got Poznan. Alexander, however, turned his share of Poland into an autonomous Kingdom with a coinage of its own. His Polish coins show the Arms of the Realm, complete with Crown and mantle, upon the Russian Imperial Eagle. Poland kept her semi-autonomous status under the next Emperor, Alexander's brother Nicolas I. In 1830 she rose in arms against Nicolas. The Poles lost that war and with the disappearance of Polish autonomy within the Russian Empire, the coinage of Poland ceased. Finally, after 1918, a new Republic was created and Polish coins appeared once more. But the Republic fell victim to the ambitions of Russia and Germany during and after the last War.

ORDER OF THE WHITE EAGLE

THE ROYAL POLISH ORDER OF THE WHITE EAGLE

Lot #	Estimate
424	The Star and Badge of the Order and the small Cross of the Order of St. Stanislaus. The Badge in gold, enamel, and diamonds, measures 85x120 mm. and weighs approximately 236.2 grams, or 7½ ounces. It is of heavy gold, with the exception of the diamond set suspension ring which is silver gilt. There are 52 diamonds of old fashioned cut, weighing about 25 carats in all and mounted in silver as was the custom at the time. These include 8 large stones mounted on the points of the Cross, 4 large stones between the arms and 3 large foil mounted stones in the suspension ring. The Star, of copper gilt with hinged Rays, carries a cross of the Order in silver and gold bordered with 100 small rubies weighing about 15 carats. The Badge of St. Stanislaus, in gold and enamel, is 39 mm. square and contains 19 small diamonds weighing about 1 carat. The Polish Order of the White Eagle, founded in 1713, existed as one of the principal distinctions in Europe until about 1795 when the independence of Poland was completely submerged under the iron heel of Russian domination. The insignia of the Order were of a richness unusual even in the 18th Century. To our knowledge the set offered here can only be duplicated in the Green Valuts of the Palace in Dresden, the celebrated Treasury of the Saxon Kings. It should be noted that the Knights of the White Eagle were also Knights of St. Stanislaus, the second Polish Order founded in 1765. This set of insignia is presumed to have been once worn by Stanislaus Poniatowski, the last king of Poland. It was brought out of Russia by the Fabergé Family, the last Court Jewelers to the Emperor. We call your attention to Lot 404, the Gold Medal struck by August III, on the occasion of the Anniversary of the Order, which coincided with his own. It should be noted that the Collar, or gold chain of the White Eagle, is shown on the reverse of this medal, lying on a table. Apart from the intrinsic value, this set of insignia is Extremely Rare. No similar insignia of the Order is likely to appear on the market for many years. Extra Fine. (6,000.00)

THE BENGTSON COLLECTION

SWEDISH SILVER AND COPPER COINS

Mr. A. Bengtson was born in Falkenberg, Sweden, a small town located between Malmo and Gothenburg. In 1926 he emigrated to the United States. His interest in Swedish coins, however, has roots set deeply in the past. He started collecting fifty-five years ago after finding an old Greek coin buried in a field. His father was a collector before him.

We are proud to offer Mr. Bengtson's fine group of Swedish silver and copper coins. There are 250 Lots that include about 600 individual pieces. Among the rarities are two Double Riksdalers of Johan III, an unpublished Double Riksdaler of 1610 commemorating the founding of the city of Gothenburg, 20 Mark pieces dated 1606 and 1608, quadruple and triple death thalers of Gustavus II Adolphus, and many others.

We believe that the Bengtson Collection is one of the most important groups of Swedish material to come on the market in some years.
